

HOW CNY WORKS One Group Center Session
OCL Study Session 6: "A longitudinal look at CNY's economy."
12/7/2016, 12:00 PM – 1:30 PM

The current study, "How CNY Works: Examining the Diversity of our Economic Base – Past, Present & Future," began on 9/27 at the Salt Museum. Our first session helped establish important historical context. Session two looked at our region's economic base today, and in the emerging future. Session three looked at work and the role of organized labor. Session four focused on economic development and included a wide variety of practitioners. Session five examined workforce development efforts and considered how CNY residents become connected to jobs. Session six will help us imagine the past and future of CNY's economic base, looking at the history of a business district in early Syracuse, then examining emerging trends, alternatives in work and wages, the future of work, and implications in terms of public policy, economic ecosystem, and poverty reduction.

- I. Le Moyne College student presentation on the history of businesses found in the 200 block of W. Water St., from the early days of Syracuse*
- II. Presentation by Professor Wayne Grove on the dynamics of local economies, and explanations and causes for the deindustrialization of the rust belt cities
- III. Presentation by David Mankiewicz on the future shape of work and employment in light of technological, generational and global shifts
- IV. Q&A

*The study that Alex and Michael are conducting of 200 W. Water St. is modeled on a 400-year history of one block in New York City, Greene Street in Soho: <http://www.nyudri.org/research-index/2016/greenest>. The Greene Street project website: <http://www.greenestreet.nyc/>.

Thank You: We extend our grateful appreciation to today's panel members – Wayne Grove, PhD., Professor of Economics at Le Moyne College, Alex and Michael, students at Le Moyne College, David Mankiewicz, SVP, Research, Policy & Planning at CenterState CEO and President of the University Hill Corporation – and to our hosts at OneGroup Center.

Next Up: Session 7, tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, 12/14, 12:00 – 1:30 PM @ the South Side Innovation Center, 2610 S Salina St., Syracuse, NY 13205. This session will explore "Neighborhood Economic Development."
